TETTENHALL, Monday.

The return match between Staffordshire and Cheshire was commenced to-day on the Wolverhampton Cricket Ground, in glorious weather. The attendance was rather meagre when Cheshire went to the wickets, the visitors captain having won the toss. Staffordshire again included Gill in their team, while there were several other alterations from the team that did duty against Notts the previous week. CHESHIRE BATSMEN OPEN CAUTIOUSLY.

that did duty against Notts the previous week. CHESHIRE BATSMEN OPEN CAUTIOUSLY.

F. C. Wild and E. Osborn were the initial batsmen for Cheshire, and Deyes opened the bowling to Wild, and from his fourth delivery he scored a single, placing the ball through the slips. Prior to this Gill, who was fielding at third man, had picked up cleverly on two occasions from the same batsman. Unfortunately for Staffordshire, Barnes was suffering from an injured leg, and in consequence did not bowl at the outset Gill, therefore, shared the attack with Deyes, and his first delivery Wild snicked through the slips for four. From the next delivery four byes were procured, following which no further runs were recorded in the over. Osborn opened his score with a single, in the subsequent over from Deyes, while his colleague scored a three, and then off Gill's bowling, the same batsman secured a couple. Deyes followed with a maiden over. but Gill was punished somewhat when again bowling, Wild first playing him to leg for four, then in the direction of the off boundary for three. Each batsman also secured a single in the same over. Another boundary hit was placed to the credit of Wild, when Deves was bowling, following which he notched a single. He was indeed scoring at a fast pace, and was giving a excellent exhibition in fact, he had registered 25 against three scored by his partner. Thirty-eight runs were recorded after thirty minutes rlay, and at 43, despite the condition of his knee, Barnes bowled instead of Deyes, three singles being filled by G. Howard Smith. The half-century was recorded after thirty minutes rlay, and at 41 despite the condition of his knee, Barnes bowled instead of Deyes, three singles being filled by G. Howard Smith. The half-century was recorded after thirty minutes relieved Gill, who had howled six overs at a cost of 30 runs. Wild played Vost's first delivery for a single, and then Osborn followed with a couple.

with a couple.

VOST OBTAINS FIRST TWO WICKETS.

The batsmen appeared quite at home to the opposition afforded, and it was at a time when they were displaying such confidence that the breakdown occurred. Wild, after scoring a bright 39, was brilliantly taken in the slips by Nichole, Vost being the howler. His best hits were five fours, two threes, and a two. Oshern, on the other hand, had scored 19, and the first wicket, fell at 69 Moorhouse, the Crewe professional, followed, but he was bowled with his first delivery from Vost, the score being unaltered. With T. W. Blundell as partner, to Osborn, the score was quickly carried to 70, but the subsequent scoring was at a much slower pace. Osborn received a nasty knock on the fingers, and had to retire to receive attention, the game being stopped a few minutes. The score had reached 84 when Gul was again called upon. He bowled instead of Barnes. The total had only been increased by one, when Osborn was smartly taken at the wicket by Poole, his contribution to the score being 26. Vost was responsible for all the three wickets, sacuring them at a cost of thirteen runs. Lunch was then taken.

The services of Deyes were again requisitioned before lunch, when the score had been carried to 103, but his bowling so far had no impression. One hundred and ten had been scored when the luncheon interval was taken, and when play was again resumed Barnes and Deyes shared the attack. It was perfectly apparent that Barnes could not nut his best work in evidence, being severely handicapped by his injury, but at the same time the batsmen had to treat his various deliveries with great respect. Blundell was the phie' hatsman, because he was more pronounced from a scoring point of view than his opponent. He played very interesting cricket, accomplishing many pretty strokes. He also scored at a fair pace, and after an hour's batting had 00 to his redit. Up to this point he had layed a faultless innings, but he now gave a chance in the slips, but fortunately for the batsman it went just

STAFFORDSHIRE v. CHESHIRE

Second-class Counties Championship.

Last season's result Staffordshire won and 103 runs. Scores: Staffordshire, 151 (P. Briggs 54); Cheshire, 26 (Barnes eight for 6) and 14 (Barnes is for 7, Bucknell four for 6).

TETTENHALL, Tucsday.

The Cestrians compiled a total score of 285 before they were dismissed, and Staffordshire were left with an hour and a quarter at the wickets before stumps were drawn. To the bowling of Hunter and Smoker, R. C. Page and Nichols opened, and the spectators were afforded an exhibition of really sterling cricket, neither batsmen took any undue liberty with the bowling, displaying the greatest possible care, with the result that at the close of play, on Monday, they were still partners. Baker and Moorhouse eventually re-lieved their colleagues with the ball, but still pariners. Baker and Moorhouse eventually relieved their colleagues with the ball, but still the betsmen were not to be beaten. Nichols scored a bright 38, and Page 35, and with seven extras 80 runs were registered. The wicket again played easy this morning when Nichols and Page resumed to the bowling of Smoker and Barker. The oraning deliveries from Smoker were received by Page, and the scorehad not been increased when he was taken in the slips by Vost who was fielding as substitute. Mr. D. Stratton filled the vacancy, and it was early apparent he was again in good form. He quickly reached double figures, opening with a three and then put Smoker for four. Nichols also played bretty cricket and completed his fifty after an hour and thirty-five minutes cricket, while the century had been registered five minutes previously. Immediately afterwards Nichols seemed to lose his stendiness, and played diagrecously to square leg for two, and then through the slirs for one. On both occasions he skied the ball, and he had only succeeded in registering another single when, in playing Barker to leg, he placed the hall right into the hands of Wild, the second wicket falling at one hundred and eight. His best hits were six fours, one three, and six twos.

The Stratton E. W. Page partnership was productive of twenty runs, but the Stafford-shire cartain was the most prominent, being responsible for quite a variety of strekes. Page had scored cicht, when Barker, who was keening a splendid length, clean bowled him. Vost now ioned Stratton, and the two played very stoadily. Stratton corred a dozch successive singles, while his partner reached double figures with a three and a four to leg, and three singles.

STAFFS, CAPTAIN IN GOOD FORM.

STAFFS. CAPTAIN IN GOOD FORM.

There was a frequent change in the bowling, but the score was gradually increased to 150 after two hours and a half batting. The score had only been augmented by five, when litured howled instead of Barker, and this time the change had its effect. Stratton being bowled by his first delivery, after scoring a useful 57. Vost and Beddows made the next partnershin, which yielded 34 runs. Vost being smartly caugh, at the wicket, when the total score stood at 189. making a comparison with the fall of wickets in the Cheshire innings.

Staffordshire held an advantage up to the third wicket. When the fourth wicket fell they were 25 in arrears, but the fifth fell within eight of the then Cheshire total. Barnes was dismissed at 201, the Cheshire spore for the loss of six wickets being 208. Following Vost. Gill took up the position at the crease, and orened with a three to log. For some time after he was unable to secure the bowling. Beddow doing the scoring. Wild, the Cheshire captain, seemed to attach great importance to changing the bowling, but when he gagin introduced Moorhouse and Hunter for Barker and Hildteh, he certainly made a mindake, because the bowlers were causing the balsmen not a little anxiety.

As it happened, however, the change again noved disastrous to Staffordshird, because in his second over. Hunter captured Gill's wicker, he being well taken by Smoker at deep leg. The score had now reached 219, and when Howard Smith joined Beddows, the game hecame more and more interesting. The lunch interval was taken when the total score stood at 233, Beddows and Smith resumed, and the spectators became quite enthusiastic, both batsmen being responsible "lor" some pretty strokes. They did not score at a very fast pace. Noverthe less, the score board continued to move, and the prospects of accomplishing their task wore a more rosy aspect. But, ill-luck degred their footsteps eventually, because at 244, Barker clean bowled Beddows, while five minutes later. Smith's wicket was upset by Smoker. Their scores were 37 and 20 respectively. R. A. J. Poole and Deyes were the last pair at the wickets, and the former scored a beautiful four to the off all rup. The innings closed for 252 after lasting four hours and twenty-five minutes. Cheshire led by 33 on the first innings.
