B.M.), elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Campin (O. B.M.), elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Campin (O. B.M.), elder son of Mr. and Mrs. Campin (O. B.M.), elder son of Mrs. Campin (O. Aged 22, Campin Was a sportsman of exceptional promise, who made his mark in cricket and Rugby at the Modern School and played in the Bedfordshipe Eleven when he was sixteen. After many fine bowling performances for the School, he made his debut for the County against Cambridgeshire in 1939, taking four for 70 in the first innings and one for 26 in the second. In the return match at Luton his figures were three for 31 and three for 12, and in the final averages for the season he was third with 11 wickets at a cost of 186 runs.

For Leighton Buzzard in 1941 he bowled 154 overs, taking 70 wickets at a cost of 434 runs (average 6.2), and in his first over against Luton Town he did the hat trick, finishing the match with eight for 16. He headed the club's bowling averages that year and attracted the attention of Northamptonshire C.C.

Campin played full-back for the School XV and several times he figured with conspibuous success in the Town side.

Before joining the R.A.F.
Campin was employed in the County Civil Defence organization at the Shire Hall. He was a keen member of the Shelton Road Methodist Church, being associated with the Young Men's Circle and Sunday School there. He will be greatly missed by many friends.

The following tribute has been received:

"We sportsmen of Marston fael deeply the loss of our great friend, Ken Campin, who has given his lite for his tountry. Ken was respected and admired by us all for his true sportsmanship. He played both football and cricket with the same loyalty to his team as he showed in serving his country. He has been taken from us at an early age, but his fine qualities will be an example to the young sportsmen of Marston."

THE LATE MR. BERTRAM PEEL

Former Bedford School Cricket Captain

One of Bedford School's best cricketers nearly half a century ago. Mr. Bertram Lennox Peel died in Edinburgh on Friday, aged 63. He was the eldest son of the late Mr. Edward Lennox Peel, and was in the School XI for three seasons, being captain in 1900. He made three centuries for the School, where he was a scholar from 1894 to 1900, and altogether he compiled 1,097 runs as a member of the Eleven.

1.097 runs as a member of the Eleven.

While a student at Hertford College, Oxford, he played criclet for the Harlequins and the Authenties, and he later had the distinction of being in the Scotland XI. From 1924 until the Paily part of the war Mr. Peel was a classical master Edinburgh Academy.

Mr. Peel was the eldest of six brothers who latended Bedford School. C. Lawrence Kinloch Peel (1894-02) and Denis H. Peel (194-05) also played in the Schöol XI for three seasons, D. H. being captain in 1905. Lawrence was awarded the C.B. in the King's Birthday Honours List last year. Capt. Geoffrey Péel (1902-13) and Sec. Lieut. Ambrose E. Peel (1906-16), both of the Bedfordshire Regiment, were killed in action in the last war. Ronald T. Peel, C.B.E., M.C., was at the School from 1900 to 1911,

"DICK" ROGERS IS HERE AGAIN

Modern School Cricket's "Grand Old Man"

At 92 years of age, Mr. "Dick". Rogers still believes that a change of stene and company is good for a man. He spends winter in Yorkshire with his daughter or in Oxford with his son. When summer is on the way "Dick" packs his bags again, but this time his destination is certain to be Bedford. Travel where he may during the long, cold months, it is unthinkable that his summer home should be any other than the house (No. 52) at the top of Clarendon Street: For here he is near his life's work and monument—the Bedford Modern School playing field, which, about 60 years ago, he created out of a wasteland of thistles, weeds, old tins, and kettles. Soon after his appointment to the post of groundsman in 1883. Dr. Poole, then Head Master, entrusted him with that formidable task, and though for the past 19 years he has lived in retirement, "Dick" has never been able to leave for long the scene that is so dear to his heart.

A week or two ago he returned from Yorkshire, and when, next term, willow blades are flashing in the sunshine, "Dick" will be on the field, as always, to keep his discerning eye on the School's cricket.

"RETIRED, NOT HURT"

when, in 1926, Old Modernians made him a gift of a handsome sum of money, and masters and boys presented him with a gold watch, "Dick" looked back on 43 years' grand service as cricket coach and groundsman, and said in the accents of his native Oxfordshire: "I am not bowled out, neither am I run out. I have retired, not hurt." So, in the terms of the game he loves best, he indicated that his long innings had been a happy one. But his retirement was more official than actual. With Cyril Rogers succeeding him, "Dick" doubtless considered that a father's experience and advice could not be discarded, and Cyril's knowledge of turf and ability to prepare a wicket good enough for a first-class match owe much to his guidance. As for coaching, "Dick" took the under-fourteens until he was ninety. What better proof could there be of the School's faith in him than that he should be allowed, despite his years, to handle boys of an arge at which wise ceaching is all-important if their promise is to be fulfilled."

Richard Rogers belongs to Modern School cricket for all time, for no one has done more to inculcate the love of the game into the boys of successive generations. Himself a County butsman, he has in so many cases proved his capreity for bringing the cricketing clents of others to fruition. From nine years of age A. O. Jones was under "Dick's" wing, and every lover of the meadow game knows that name—the name of an England captain and of an all-rounder whose power is still spoken of whenever cricket's golden age is discussed, "Dick" watched over the flowering of Jones's exceptional talents in the late 'eighties, and his opinion is that the 'School never had such a fine side as that captained by Jones. Including L. G. Brown, J. O. Anderson, C. H. S. G. Loraine, T. M. C. Hunt, and the Potter brothers, F. W. and H. C., this team had an unbeaten record in 1887.

SCHOOL'S BEST BATSMAN?

unbeaten record in 1887.

SCHOOL'S BEST BATSMAN?

If Jones was the best all-round cricketer the School has produced, "Dick" thinks the highest honours for batting should go to N. T. D. Oliver, who captained the 1902-3 XI's. In 1903 there were three Oliver brothers—N. T. D., E. C., and R. E.—in the team, and the micdle nineties saw the advent of the Turner brothers, W. C. D., A. J., and W. M., all of whom later played for Essex. Colonel A. J. Turner also had the honour of appearing in the Gentlemen of England XI.

Among the great number of other fine cricketers whose abilities "Dick" helped to mould were T. M. C. Hunt, the Berkshire bowler, and E. H. Philbrick, Leicestershire wicketkeeper.

Modern School cricket was in a very real sense "Dick's" mission in life, and he seemed to have regarded summer's other leading sport, rowing, with ill-concealed disfavour. It is on record that he once said to a School cricketer apparently out of form, "Well, there's a river and a boat club. Why don't you join that? You'll never do any good here." On another occasion "Dick" watched a member of the boat club making runs, and was overheard saying to himself, "Pity about that blooming river—I wish it was 20 miles away."

wish it was 20 miles away."

AGAINST TOM RICHARDSON

Many good scores made in County and club cricket stand
as testimony to "Dick's" powers
as a batsman. He first played for Bedfordshire in the '80's,
when Mr. L. C. R. Thring, Head
Master of Dunstable Grammar School, was captain; and in 1895 he headed the County averages at 42 runs per innings. Consistency was one of his best qualities, as can be judged by the fact that his highest score for Bedfordshire that season was 78, against Norfolk. In his last County match, at the Oval, that most lion-hearted of fast bowlers,
Tom Richardson, was in the Surrey 2nd XJ, and "Dick" made about 30 runs. One of
"Dick's" most vivid memories is Bedfordshire's victory by eight wickets over Surrey 2nd XI at Luton.

Bedfordshire was able to put
a very fibe side into the field in those days. Among "Dick's" team-mates were W. F. Brown,
slow left-arm bowler; Fred Potter; Tom Brown, fast bowler;
L. G. Brown, wicket-keeper;
Tom Small and Cilder, Luton players: and C. G. Pope, a Cambridge Blue.

Two of "Dick's" finest knocks for Bedford Town were 162 not out (his highest score) against Tufnell Park, and 112 not out against Luton.

Although "Dick" had firsthand experience of Tom Rich(Cantibuse in meast solumn) ardson's pace, he considers Arthur Mold, of Northamptonshire and later of Lancashire, to have been the fastest bowler he ever met. He recalls that in one match, on what is now the Bedford Rugby Club's ground and was the Modern School's playing field when "Dick" was appointed groundsman, Mold's attack broke the fingers of Dr. Chillingworth and H. W. Oclee.

THE GREAT RECORD OF "DICK" ROGERS

He Laid Most Grounds in Bedfordshire

(Concluded)

"Dick." Rogers has spent the greater part of his ninety-two years in one little corner of the earth—the Bedford Modern School playing field, which came into being under his supervision more than half a century ago and was in his expert care until 1926. But his name crops up quite inevitably wherever Old Modernians meet; be the place thousands of miles from Bedford, "Dick." is mentioned just as surely as is the School.

What a joy it is for them to rainember the "grand old man"; to picture him against the background of their schooldays, perhaps moving about the field as summer blossomed all around, and pausing to tell Jones minor at the nets to "keep that bat straight"; or maybe bending over a wicket he had just prepared and feeling the texture of it like a cloth-buyer testing materials. Yes: "Dick" is regarded with warm affection by all O.B.M's, and especially those whom he taught the arts of cricket. They think of him as one of those men who carrich the nature of the game and invest it with character.

A FORMIDABLE TASK

A FORMIDABLE TASK

Last week I wrote that the Modern School playing field was "Dick's" monument, built by himself. Go back over sixty-years and visualize a youngish man in a bowler hat with a very narrow brim and wearing a big white tie. He is interviewed by the Head Master, 'Dr. Poole, shrewd judge of a man if ever there was one, and young "Dick" is engaged as groundsman. The ground? A stretch of pasture land off Goldington Rond—later the County Ground—but Dr. Poole has a formidable task in store for "Dick". The day soon comes when the Head tasks him to see some acres of waste land covered with hillocks, thistles, weeds, and old tins, and says it is henceforth Bedford Modern School cricket ground.

Undismayed, "Dick" set to work. There is no need after all those years to say what a success he made of the job or to emphasize that the Modern School cricket table has been spoken of in the most laudatory terms by such noted players as Michael Falcon.

But "Dick's" reputation was not to be confined to the Modern School, and the remarkable fact is that he laid out more grounds in Bedfordshire them all other people put together. An idea of his labours may be gained from this list of the ground (developed). Elstow School ground (developed). Elstow School ground (developed). Elstow School ground (developed). Elstow School ground (developed). In the opinion of many cricketers—and the playing fields at Kimbolton Grammar School and Dunstable Grammar School.

A PERFECT GROUND

Even beyond the borders of Bedfordshire, "Dick's" services were called upon. There is the story of the touring cricketer who, while travelling through the West of England, saw what he considered to be as perfect a cricket ground as he could imagine. He made inquiries as to who made it. The reply was: "R. Rogers, professional, Bedford Modern School,"

When, in 1917, Allen Park was opened with a match between Bedfordshire and Norfolk, Michael Falcon described the wicket as one of the best and truest he had ever known. It was only a year before that "Dick" laid this ground, and for a wicket towin such praise after so short a time was testimony inded to his skill. "Dick" himself thinks Allen Park is one of his best achievements.

He was given the task of developing Bedford School ground by Mr. Phillpotts and the beautiful wickets which groundsmen over since have been able to prepare there owe much to his pioneer work. The High School ground is entirely the work of the Rogers family. After "Dick" had laid it his eldest son, Henry—more popularly known as Jack—became groundsman. At that time Henry was only 15, and for three years his father superintended his labours. Henry Rogers is still the High School groundsman, a post he has occupied for over forty years. years.

UNIQUE FAMILY RECORD

The Rogers family's record in The Rogers family's record in ground-keeping is surely without equal. "Dick's" father, Charles, was groundsman at Balliol College, Oxford, for 45 years. "Dick" had four brothers, all of whom were groundsmen and who blessed England—especially Oxford colleges—with "groundsmen sens. They were: Harry Rogers, at Worcester College for 52 years; Joe, at Magdalen College 41 years; Alfred, at Exeter College for 33 years; and Peter, at St. John's for 31 years, larry, aged 90, is still living. One of "Dick's" numerous nephews is groundsman at Radley College, where "Dick" himself began his life's work at 13 years by rolling turf for a shilling a week. He secured his first appointment two years later when he was given chause of the ground at Chatham House School, Ramsgate, where he met the lady whom he was to marry. She died in 1927 after fifty years of happy married life. Before coming to Bedford, "Dick" was engaged by Worcester College, Oxford, and Felstead School, and in those days he played cricket, for Oxfordshire.

"Dick" has three sons carrying on the family tradition. Cyril succeeded him at the Modern School, Herry has charge of the High School ground, and Basil—at one time a professional cricketer for Glamorgan—is groundsman at St. John's College, Oxford, where he took over from his uncle twenty years ago.

Before the last war "Dick" was an umpire in the Minor Counties Chompionship. He "stood" at a Cardiff match in which an Australian eleven, including Warwick Armstrong Clem Hill, Victor Trumper, Noble, and Ernest Jones, opposed a team selected from Glamorgan, Wiltshire, and Monmouthshire.

Cricket and the job "Dick" did so well have grown into the very texture of his being. The sunching of many summers has burned on his fine face and left the healthy tan that denotes a man of the open air. Long may he yet be spared to see his field white with young cricketers, and, in the mind's eye, to watch the sient hoss of the past as they flicker, run-stealing and ball-chasing, ecross the screen of his memories

CRICKET SCORING IN THE MODERN WAY

Bedford Bowler Invented a New System

This summer there has appeared on the local cricket scene one Kenneth McCanlis. who, from 1934 to 1936, played regularly for Surrey 2nd XI as a fast bowler. Married to a Bedfordian, formerly Miss Vera Mathers, he now lives in the town, and on Saturday afternoons he sends down rather slower deliveries to the opponents of Bedford Town C.C. Strained leg muscles compelled him to give up fast bowling, but he remains a fine cricketer and also a keen student of the game.

His keenness is not confined to the arts of cricket. Years ago McCanlis turned his attention to the statistical side and found it so fascinating that, in collaboration with his brother, he evolved a far more comprehensive system of scoring than had hitherto been known. The score book commonly in use tells you a lot—but by no means everything. The McCanlis system enables you to see, from the mere record, a match in retrospect with a greater degree of accuracy. Nowadays numerous English county clubs and every other cricketing country, with the exception, strangely enough, of Australia, favours the system. The late Mr. Rogers. Bedfordshire Cricket Club's scorer, used it for several seasons up to the war.

It differs in various ways from the old score books, yet the sons up to the war.

It differs in various ways from the old score books, yet the scorer's work is simplified as soon as he has taken due note of the instructions given. The fundamental change is in the matter of recording a batsman's runs and a bowler's analysis. The McCanlis brothers have merged the two processes. Instead of long lines opposite the batsman's name there are squares wherein his runs and the balls delivered to him are recorded at the same time.

Thus it is possible to see at recorded at the same time.

Thus it is possible to see at a glance the number of balls received, and the runs scored therefrom, by any batsman from any bowler. Here is the incontrovertible truth about a player's rate of scoring. Mr. McCanlis thinks that the time a batsman spends at the wicket is, in most cases, misleading. The important factor is the number of deliveries he actually receives.

AT THE BOWLER'S END

Explaining his system to me (writes H. J. D.), Mr. McCanlis showed me instances, from his records of county matches, where batsmen have been at the records of county matches, where batsmen have been at the bowlers' end for almost every ball of several overs in succession. There are other circumstances to be taken into account. Mr. McCanlis recalled how a famous England cricketer wonthe Lawrence trophy for the fastest hundred a few seasons ago. He appeared to be two or three minutes faster than another batsman who made a hurricane century in the same season. The point overlooked was that the trophy winner made his runs in one partnership, whereas the other man saw four wickets fall. And each fatlen wicket meant a delay of at least two minutes.

fallen wicket meant a delay of at least two minutes.

It would need more space than is available to deal in detail with the McCanlis scoring system. But here are a few prints. The cumulative score is shown above each over; so, toe is the number of overs. bowied by each man sharing in the attack and the number of runs scored in an over. There is a space for notes. Against the batsman's name are two squares marked "time in" and "time out", and another space in which is written the position of the fieldsman who may catch him. At a glance the score sheet tells you all; and, what is important for the scorer, the calculations to be made at the end of an innings are considerably minimized.

K. McCanlis, grandson of a Kent County cricketer, had the unique experience of taking wickets with his first and last deliveries for the Surrey 2nd XI. His best performance was six for 13 against Suffolk eleven years ago.

The final of the County Hospital Cup competition between R.A.F. (Cardington) and R.A.F. (Little Staughton) will be played at the Bedford Modern School ground at 2.30 p.m. on 25th August.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE'S GOOD START

Bright Batting in County Match at Bedford

In the first match of the war for both counties, Cambridge-shire made a good start against Bedfordshire at the Bedford School ground yesterday (Thursday), their opening pair scoring 51 for the first wicket. The home County fielded three members of their pre-war side—A. B. Poole (captain), J. A. R. Oliver, and H. A. Soutbgate-while five old players appeared in the Cambridgeshire eleven. which also included B. M. Trapnell, the Cambridge University bowler.

Rain delayed the start for half an hour. Cambridgeshire, winning the toss, elected to bat, and C. E. Coote, their captain, who is groundsman at Fenner's, opened the innings with Taylor. Coote, a left-hander, began confidently, and he hit a four to leg off the first ball, from Cornell, the Harpur Sports all-rounder. He also punished Bambridge, bowling from the School end, for two boundaries, but the Bedford Mogens School bowler should have had Coote's wicket when he had made 17. Mays missing a fairly easy caten at deep square leg.

Scoring was at the rate of a run a minute in the first half an hour, and the bowlers did not appear to be getting much assistance from the wicket. Oliver, first change for Cornell, bowled well, without luck, and Coote with a single to leg, off Poole, brought the visitors' total to 50 in 58 minutes. One run later Matthews, the sixth bowler to be tried, broke the partnership with his fifth ball, Coote hitting it straight into Poole's hands at forward short leg. Coote's 28 included three boundaries.

When Leeming icined Taylor, the scoring pace slackened somewhat, and the pair remained together until the luncheon interval, when the total was 70 for one.

Cambridgeshire's bright batting after lunch was a contrast to the dull and cheerless weather. At 98 Taylor was caught low down at first slip, his chanceless innings of 43 having occupied nearly to hours.

Leeming continued to force the pace, and when he was third out at 141, he had made 53 out of 90 in 75 minutes. He hit five 4's. With only two runs added. Ellis was caught at slip without scoring.

Scores at 5 p.m. were:—

COUNTY HAVE WORST OF DRAW

Oliver and Poole to the Rescue at Fenner's

A gallant seventh wicket stand between A. B. Poole, their captain, and John Oliver, saved Bedfordshire from almost certain defeat in their return match against against cambridgeshire at Fenner's on Saturday. As it was, Bedfordshir, had the worst of a drawn gamfinishing 124 runs behind with only two wickets in hand.

Poole and Oliver came together when Bedfordshire were in the doldrums, having scored only 94 for the loss of six wickets in reply to their opponents' formidable total of 296 for three declared. Bedfordshire's early batsmen never looked like giving the home bowlers serious frouble. There was some sensational cricket soon after teawhen Clark, Owen, and Hawle were dismissed in four balls. A this stage Trapnell, the Cambridge University spin-bowler had captured three wickets fo 15 runs in eight over, three owhich were maidens.

The dismissal of Mays at 9 brought Poole and Oliver together with about 70 minutes remaining for play. They took th score to 168, when Poole wa clean bowled. His 39, which included four boundaries, was worth a hundred to his side. A the close Oliver was undefeated for an invaluable half-century.

Earlier in the day the visitors won the toss and sent Cambridgeshire in, but Poole's movenever met with the success he anticipated. A splendid opening stand between Coote and Taylor showed that the wicket had no terrors for them. They scored 110 in 88 minutes before Coofe was caught in the gulicy When the score was 163.
